

my handwriting is a window to my soul

carefully printed
rounded edges
trying its hardest
not to take up
too much space

it looks calm
predictable
dependable

like someone who has never fallen apart

it is structure
disguised as gentleness confidence in a cloak

high expectations
hidden in the spacing
of the words
perfectionism
pressed into every stroke

the desperate need to be understood without being too loud
even my lowercase letters feel afraid of
inconveniencing someone